Hoopeston Area board candidates list views on issues

Editor's Note: Eleven people are running for four seats on the Hoopeston Area school board in the Nov. 4 election.

For these interviews, candidates were asked why they chose to run, what issues face the district, and their opinions on consolidation and drug testing.

Jeff Stipp, 35, candidate for the Hoopeston Area school board has "a sincere interest" in the workings of the district because he has two children in the system.

Stipp, president and general manager of Hoopeston Fertilizer, is unaware of major issues facing the district. "I haven't even served on the school board so I don't think it's fair to speculate," he said.

However, he said, there are things that "may or may not need to be discussed," including the upcoming retirement of key administrative and teaching personnel and the possibility of consolidation as a way to keep enrollment from dropping.

Regarding drug testing, Stipp said he would have to weigh the issue. "Is the drug problem bad," he asked. "I don't know if it is or if it isn't."

Stipp said his life experience could be an asset. "I'm no stranger to sitting on a board," he said, adding he has been on his church board since 1990. Also, his work provides insight that would be useful. Stipp believes his age is another asset. "I've got a 'my kind of generation' outlook," he said. "I have a very good comfort level with running."

Seeking a seat is "the right thing to do at the right time," said Terry Beauvois, 47, a life-long resident.

Issues facing the district include keeping finances in the black and keeping good teachers and programs currently in the schools, he said.

Beauvois, who has two children in the schools, sees consolidation as "an on-going thing until other schools decide what they're going to do." Joining with Rossville would be good for both schools, he added.

As for drug testing, "I don't know as we've got that big a problem in the Hoopeston schools," he said. "If we do, random testing might be OK. If they thought there was a problem, I wouldn't mind it," he added.

Beauvois serves on his church board in Potomac and as a Hoopeston fireman and sees being a team member
